It is understood that the lens apparatus is susceptible of extremely varied forms, and it belongs to the engineers to adopt, in each particular case, those which appear the best adapted to the circumstances. Further On, numerous examples will be given. LUMINOUS INTENSITIES OF THE DIFFERENT PARTS OF THE APPARATUS. The intensities of the luminous beams emitted from the principal parts of the different orders of apparatus may be estimated, in practice, as indicated in the following table. The first gives the intensities in the axis, and the second the intensities on each side of the axis, for the dioptric annular lenses, the most generally used: Intensities of the luminous beams in the...
