All wiring should be conveyed in metal conduits wherever practicable. The incandescent lights over the machines and benches should be protected by wire guards. In many well-arranged houses the lights for the entire theater are controlled by switchboards in the operator s booths. These should be of an approved type, and they should be mounted on marble bases and have all their parts well insulated. It is also advisable to have them covered by enclosures provided with hinged doors having spring catches. Careless operators sometimes bridge the terminals of fuses with copper wires after the regular fuses have burned out. This should not be permitted, but a supply of fuses should be kept on hand at all times for emergency purposes. Cartridge or plug fuses should be used in connection with switchboards, and those of the open type should be avoided....
