Army War College, 1994 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)44370328 Subject: Arab-Israeli conflict -- 1973-1993. Excerpt: . . . fundamental policy change was taking shape, one spearheaded by Israels religious establishment. Many religious leaders in 21 Israel are firm upholders of the concept of greater Israel. Defeat for the PLO. Something else troubled the Palestinians during this period--the outcome of Israels 1982 invasion of Lebanon. The invasion was undertaken to drive the PLO from bases on the Lebanese-Israeli border, and, although costly to Israel in terms of lives, it largely succeeded. The PLO was driven off, not only from the border, but out of Lebanon to Tunis, across the Mediterranean. As a consequence, the PLO lost its military option, seriously compromising its credibility. The loss became quickly apparent when the Arab Summit convened in Amman, Jordan, in 1987. 22 The Palestinian problem was virtually sidelined. Whereas in previous years Palestine had dominated the agendas of the Arab heads of state, in 1987 the Iran-Iraq War became the focus. Palestinians were shocked to find themselves ignored, if not abandoned. Difficult...
